MOTIVACIÓN DEL INFORME

Knowing that the United Nations (UN) established "Internet access as a human right" through resolution A / HRC / 20 / L.13 of June 29, 2012, and based on the current Venezuela's context, in which the traditional media are harassed everyday by government pressure, thousands of citizens have chosen to stay informed through social networks and internet portals. Situation that the authorities have taken advantage of it, and establish strict controls and criminalize the expression of discontent by those who use these mechanisms.

This report proposes to analyze specific cases that occurred in 2019. Situations, actions and policies in which the internet and expression in 2.0 have been violated, becoming the new communication paradigms that have served to intimidate and criminalize protest. Likewise, it seeks to demonstrate the advanced and established censorship that exists on internet, communications and the mechanisms that the Venezuelan State implements as blockades of these social communication media. In this way, information and communications are increasingly restricted for citizens and perpetuate communication hegemony.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Democracy and freedom of expression in Venezuela are practically non-existent, which makes the role played by digital media and social networks in a fundamental element to overcome communication hegemony and evade the censorship established as law. These are the only truly reliable information, dissemination and complaint windows for Venezuelan society at this time.

Since 2007, the government is in a constant campaign for the closure and censorship of the traditional media. As a result of these events, which constantly violate and criminalize freedom of expression in the country and the rise of the Internet and social networks as platforms for communication and deliberation, dozens of informative digital media have been created that have also been seen threatened by the migration of censorship, blockades and attacks perpetrated by the state from the physical to the digital realm. In order to control and silence public opinion and the dissemination of free thought, to prevent journalists, opposition politicians, activists, human rights defenders, personalities and citizens in general, from questioning and denouncing the Venezuelan dictatorship.

RedesAyuda is dedicated to documenting, analyzing and reporting digital events that violate freedom of expression, the right to be informed and internet access; the study of the social, political and economic context in which the country currently finds itself and the importance of the internet thru the complex humanitarian emergency and the economic, social and political crisis as a fundamental element to understand the Venezuelan reality in greater depth.

CHAPTER I INTRODUCTION

Faced the spurious reelection of dictator Nicolás Maduro in a pseudo electoral process characterized by irregularities, illegality, lack of legitimacy and non-recognition at the national and international level, Venezuelans continue to face a deepening of the Complex Humanitarian Emergency, which seriously affects them in the economic, nutritional and health spheres, putting their fundamental rights at risk. After this blow to democracy, the dictatorship sought to increase social control, using as weapons the absence of the rule of law, repression and censorship.

This year brought significant events for Venezuela. The proclamation of Juan Guaidó as president in charge and the central points of his administration: cessation of the usurpation, transitional government and free elections, filled Venezuelans with hope. However, the dictatorship continues to maintain control of the institutions, increasing the deterioration of the state of basic services and increasing both the impact and the number of blackouts throughout the national territory, making it difficult for Venezuelans to stay informed and communicate during them.

During 2019, the dictatorship increased control over digital media, Venezuelan cinema, social networks and other digital platforms; implementing tactical blocks that temporarily prevented Venezuelans from accessing certain web pages, carrying out cyberattacks on independent media, phishing attacks on opposition platforms to steal their users' data, trying to hack into social media accounts of civil society organizations, preventing the diffusion of documentaries, harassing users on social networks through trolls and positioning their messages to generate disinformation through the use of political bots.

The dictatorship continues to censor the traditional media, shutting down and arbitrarily removing the news media from the air or circulation, for covering events of interest to citizens. Similarly, it is negligent in not promoting and implementing public policies that encourage public and private investment in infrastructure to strengthen the service offered by ISPs in Venezuela, which hinders the advancement and development of tools and solutions that allow the development and well-being of citizens; such as virtual education, telemedicine and the digital economy. Although on August 22 Nicolás Maduro announced the start of the Fiber Optic Plan to Home¹, which according to the dictatorship would guarantee high-speed Internet access in the national territory through CANTV, Venezuela continues to be the country with the slowest Internet in Latin America and one of the slowest in the world.

In this report development, RedesAyuda registered 170 cases in which the violation and criminalization of freedom of expression was evidenced, in addition to the deepening of the control of the dictatorship in digital media and the limitations faced by these platforms, journalists, activists, human rights defenders and citizens in general, to exercise their rights to inform and be informed. This figure represents an increase of 639% compared to 2017, the year in which 23 cases were documented and an increase of 315% compared to 2018, the year where 41 cases were documented; demonstrating that for the dictatorship the objective remains the same: to control public opinion by force, minimize the exercise of freedom of expression, limit the right to information and restrict Internet access.

CHAPTER II REPRESSIVE CONTEXT

SOCIAL-POLITICAL CONTEXT

2019 year began with important events in the socio-political sphere in Venezuela. Dictator Nicolás Maduro tried to swear in illegally and illegitimately as President of the Republic on January 10², amid a Complex Humanitarian Emergency, with a significant increase in the deterioration of basic services compared to 2018. Venezuelans faced blackouts not only affected communications and Internet access, but also further limited access to essential services such as potable water, domestic gas, electricity and food.

Another event that impacted the country was the military uprising that occurred in Cotiza, Caracas. On the morning of January 21, an official who identified himself as Sergeant Figueroa posted a video on social networks in which, together with other GNB officials, he told citizens: *“Go out to protest and demonstrate, to demand that respect their rights. Here we are, Venezuelan people”*³. Minutes later, tanks from CONAS arrived at the scene and there was a deployment of officials from the FAES, CONAS, DGCIM and SEBIN.

Meanwhile, Cotiza’s inhabitants took to the streets to protest, and support the rebel soldiers and were received with tear gas and pellets by these government organizations. The officials who were part of this military uprising were detained by the FAES and transferred in tanks outside the General Command of Cotiza.

After that, on January 23, the president of the National Assembly, Juan Guaidó, assumed as president in charge of the Republic⁴ and was recognized by at least 50 countries, which caused Venezuelans to take to the streets in a new day of protests called by the leader the opponent. During these events, the forces of the dictatorship repressed tens of thousands of Venezuelans and murdered at least 50 between the months of January and April.⁵

Under Juan Guaidó management as Venezuelan president in charge, the Venezuela Aid Live concert was held on February 22 at the Las Tienditas international bridge, located on the Colombian-Venezuelan border. The purpose of this concert was to raise funds and pressure the dictatorship of Nicolás Maduro to allow the entry of humanitarian aid to the country.

However, on February 23, the Venezuelan dictatorship did not receive humanitarian aid. That day, Delcy Rodríguez announced the temporary closure of the border with Colombia and Nicolás Maduro announced the severance of diplomatic relations with the Colombia's government. Despite the arbitrary decisions of the dictatorship, at least 27 members of the GNB deserted in the morning and crossed the border into Colombia. Much of the humanitarian aid did not enter, amid protests and strong repression by the forces of the Venezuelan state.

On April 30, the president in charge of Venezuela woke up the Venezuelans around 6 in the morning, announcing from Twitter the start of the final phase of *Freedom Operation*⁶, along with some members of the Armed Forces and invited citizens to meet near the La Carlota air base, where he was with Leopoldo López. Thousands of citizens responded to the call and hours later were repressed with tear gas and pellets, leaving more than 60 injured. In the middle of Freedom Operation, at least 25 Venezuelan soldiers entered the Brazilian embassy in Caracas and requested asylum.

After the Captain Rafael Acosta Arévalo disappearance and arrest, by officials of the SEBIN and the DGCIM on June 21 and being accused by the dictatorship of being part of an alleged coup d'état on June 29, he was presented at the headquarters of the Fort Tiuna, the place where he fainted, so the circuit judge ordered his transfer to the military hospital, where he died. In a document released on July 3 by journalist Eligio Rojas, part of the autopsy report was shown, in which it was specified that the body had 38 injuries⁷. Around 5 family members were present at the captain's burial, given that the court in charge of the case gave the order that a controlled burial be carried out.⁸

On September 3, the National Assembly sealed the agreement in rejection of the presence and expansion of narco-terrorist groups in the national territory. Likewise, Juan Guaidó reported that he would authorize the use of digital technology to detect the sites where guerrilla groups operate in the country⁹, Guaidó assured, receive financing from Chavismo to carry out terrorist acts in Colombia and Venezuela.

2019 year further exposed the authoritarian nature of the dictatorship: arbitrary arrests, repression of peaceful protests, lack of responses and public policies to face the deterioration of public services, economic policies that do not solve structural problems, repression and censorship of the media and press workers, as well as the increase in tactical blockades to digital platforms marked the agenda of the dictatorship.

CENSORSHIP, SURVEILLANCE, DISINFORMATION AND REPRESSION OF THE FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

BAPTISTE DES MONSTIERS AND PIERRE CAILLÉ – TMC (January, 29):

French journalists Baptiste Des Monstiers and Pierre Caillé, from the Quotidien program of the TMC channel, were detained¹⁰ near the presidential palace in Miraflores, while covering the vigil called by the dictatorship of Nicolás Maduro. They were held for 2 days in Miraflores and on January 31 they were released, after the French government demanded their freedom.

RODRIGO PÉREZ AND GONZALO BARAHONA – TVN (January, 29):

Journalists Rodrigo Pérez and Gonzalo Barahona, both of Chilean nationality, were detained¹¹ while covering the vigil at the Miraflores presidential palace, where they were held for 14 hours, according to the SNTP. On the morning of January 30, they were released and deported to their native country on a flight with a stopover in Panama.

GONZALO DOMÍNGUEZ LOEDA – EFE (January, 30):

The Spanish journalist Gonzalo Domínguez Loeda was detained by SEBIN officials and transferred, under arrest, to the hotel where he was staying to collect his belongings. Later, he was taken to Helicoide, SEBIN¹² headquarters in Caracas, for questioning. The day before his arrest, he had published articles referring to the measures taken against the president in charge, Juan Guaidó. He was released on January 31.

MAUREN BARRIGA VARGAS – EFE (January, 30):

The Colombian journalist Mauren Barriga Vargas, was arrested along with her partner Gonzalo Domínguez Loeda, by SEBIN¹³. Both was transferred to the hotel where there was staying and later taken to Helicoide to be released on the afternoon of January 31.

LEONARDO MUÑOZ – EFE (January, 30):

Colombian reporter Leonardo Muñoz was arrested when he was walking the streets of Caracas during the protests that took place that same day¹⁴. According to the SNTP, he was detained by DGCIM officials. He was released on the afternoon of January 31, along with his colleagues Mauren Barriga Vargas and Gonzalo Domínguez.

HIRSALD GÓMEZ Y EMIN OZMIN (January, 31):

The Turkish photojournalists Hirsald Gómez and Emin Ozmin were kidnapped by civil groups¹⁵. Said subjects handed the journalists over to SEBIN officials at El Helicoide, where they were held for 2 hours. Both Ozmin and Gómez were released early the same day.

TWITTER BOTS SUSPENDED ACCOUNTS (February, 16):

Twitter suspended more than 1,100 accounts from Venezuela, which are presumed to be involved in a disinformation campaign promoted by the dictatorship¹⁶. According to the El País medium, the analysis of the activity and content of 9 million tweets made visible how the dictatorship used these accounts with false identities to spread and position its political propaganda, with the aim of generating in citizens the impression of having great support on social media.

Nicolás Maduro's account was the most mentioned by the suspended accounts, followed by Foro Candanga, Correo del Orinoco and Diosdado Cabello. Likewise, the most used words were "Venezuela", "people", "president", "Maduro", "government", "Chávez", "Russia" and "homeland". The suspended accounts were classified into 3 categories: a group of 3 users with hundreds of thousands of followers, a group of a couple of dozen users ranging from a few thousand to 70 thousand followers, and hundreds of accounts that were only dedicated to disseminate and replicate the content generated by the others to expand its reach through replies, retweets or mentions.

NATGEO AND ANTENA 3 (February, 22):

The SNTP denounced that the cable operators DIRECTV and Intercable removed the NatGeo and Antena 3 channels from their programming grid¹⁷. Before being censored, these media broadcast the Venezuela Aid Live concert, which sought to collect funds for humanitarian aid in Venezuela .

24H DE CHILE (February, 23):

The Chilean news outlet 24H de Chile, was removed from DIRECTV's programming grid in Venezuela¹⁸, after it broadcast the events on the Venezuelan borders with Brazil and Colombia, during the attempted entry of humanitarian aid.

DEUTSCHE WELLE (April, 13):

The SNTP denounced that CONATEL, the cable operators removed the German channel Deutsche Welle (DW) ¹⁹ from its programming grid, an international medium that has dedicated informative spaces to show the crisis in Venezuela.

RADIO CARACAS RADIO, BBC MUNDO AND CNN INTERNACIONAL (April, 30):

CONATEL forced DIRECTV to remove BBC Mundo and CNN Internacional from its programming grid. Also, the entity removed the concession to the radio station Radio Caracas Radio (RCR) ²⁰. All these media reported on the events corresponding to Freedom Operation, led by the president in charge Juan Guaidó and Leopoldo López.

The RCR media broadcast the events that took place at the La Carlota air base, after the president in charge Juan Guaidó, along with Leopoldo López, called on citizens to continue with Freedom Operation and move towards the cessation of the usurpation. RCR's director, Jaime Nestares, reported that a CONATEL commission arrived at the facilities to order the closure of the open signal.

LA PATILLA (June, 04):

In 2015, Diosdado Cabello sued the media El Nacional, Tal Cual and La Patilla, for having published on their web portals a report by the newspaper ABC of Spain, in which they pointed to Cabello as “leader of the Soles cartel” and “operator of the narco-state”. On June 4, 2019, the Supreme Court gave rise to the lawsuit and ordered La Patilla to pay Diosdado Cabello 30 billion bolivars, for “moral damage.” ²¹

CRISTOPHER FIGUERA (July, 05):

After expressing his position against the dictatorship of Nicolás Maduro and the failure of Freedom Operation, SEBIN's director, Christopher Figuera, left the country to go to Colombia and two months later he traveled to the United States, a country where he agreed to be part of different interviews in which he related how he carried out his duties for the dictatorship and assured that he had not tortured anyone.

In an interview, he expressed that during his time as director of the intelligence service, Nicolás Maduro ordered him “the dirty work” of persecuting and investigating opponents: “it was he who designed who he should persecute and instructed the prosecution to carry out” some non-legitimate acts". Likewise, he admitted following the instructions to spy in person, by phone or electronically, on about 40 opponents and then inform Maduro about their movements every 2 hours.²²

JOSÉ GUILLERMO MENDOZA (September, 19):

José Guillermo Mendoza, a graphic worker, was arbitrarily detained by a PNB checking point and transferred to Helicoide, SEBIN headquarters.²³ The worker was transferring the delivery of the printing of 1,000 pieces of graphic material from the album "Minister: What is your job? A tribute to Venezuelan punk", to the headquarters of the NGO PROVEA. The materials of this project were described as "subversive" during the detention.

PROVEA's director, Rafael Uzcátegui, and the lawyer Marino Alvarado, appeared at the Helicoide, in response to the request of PNB officials. Once at the site, they awaited the transfer of Guillermo Mendoza, which did not happen. Finally, the graphic worker was released, without charge, on September 20 and the material was returned.

DOCUMENTARY "CHAVISMO: THE PLAGUE OF THE XXI CENTURY" (Octubre, 09):

The Thirty-Sixth Court of Control of Caracas, prohibited the Simón Bolívar University (USB) and other study houses from projecting and disseminating the documentary Chavismo: *The plague of the XXI century*²⁴ in their facilities. This documentary was produced by the activist Gustavo Tovar, who was investigated by the Public Ministry, which considered that the film incurred in promotion and incitement to hatred, a pseudo-crime established in the unconstitutional Law Against Hate.

Otherside, the USB professors José Alberto Olivar, Jonás Estrada and Jorge Orellano, were harassed by Mario Silva: "These blokes think they can fight this people and they are extremely desperate. It is not only the fascist political class, but this disgusting class that calls itself "intellectual and professional" that swarms within a public university. This type of thing

MOVIE "INFECTION" (October, 11):

The first Venezuelan film about zombies, Infection, could not be screened in theaters in the country because it was not approved by the National Autonomous Cinematography Center (CNAC). This was denounced in a statement by the film's director, Flavio Pedota, who claimed to have fought with this government institution for 9 months: "We were required dozens of permits and requirements outside the film law, and even after complying with its unjust requests and deliver them all, it was not enough to achieve the premiere in national cinemas" ²⁶ he said.

PEDRO JAIMES CRIOLLO (October, 17):

After being arbitrarily detained in El Helicoide for 1 year and 5 months, Pedro Jaimes Criollo was released from prison by the Truth Commission of the illegitimate National Constituent Assembly. The measure was granted after the United Nations Working Group on Arbitrary Detentions asked the Venezuelan dictatorship for his release.²⁷

Pedro Jaimes, was arrested after posting the route of one of the flights of the presidential plane on his Twitter account, remained missing for 33 days and was tortured with electricity, simulated suffocation and repeatedly beaten until he fractured a rib. During his detention, he was denied medical and legal assistance in the first months and 16 times he was not transferred to court for preliminary and trial hearings.

POLITICS BOTS (October, 23):

According to a study by the Internet Institute of the University of Oxford, the Venezuelan dictatorship has teams of up to 500 people that execute operations through political bots and trolls, to position their messages, expand the dissemination of their speeches and intimidate and harass opponents, journalists, human rights defenders and activists.²⁸

ANA BELÉN TOVAR (November, 19):

During the raid on the Venmedios media headquarters, DGCIM officials arbitrarily detained its operations manager, Ana Belén Tovar.²⁹ She was transferred to the DGCIM headquarters located in Boleíta and deprived of communication with her relatives and lawyers. Currently, Ana Belén Tovar is still in detention.

JESÚS MEDINA (December, 05):

The photojournalist Jesús Medina, unjustly detained for more than a year. On October 3, his hearing was postponed for the tenth time and scheduled for January 30, 2020. Jesús Medina was arrested on August 29, 2018 by police officials and detained at the SEBIN headquarters. After remaining 36 hours missing, he was transferred to the Palace of Justice to be presented in court. On August 31 of that same year, he was imprisoned.

After several deferred hearings, on March 21, 8 months after his arrest, it was revealed that his health was seriously compromised. A month later (May 21), the Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) issued a statement in which it urged the Nicolás Maduro dictatorship to release the reporter, assuring that "the arrest of Jesús Medina coincides with a pattern of arbitrary arrests and harassment of opponents, critics and anyone who dares to tell the truth about what is happening in Venezuela".³⁰

On May 23, his preliminary hearing was held with 4 crimes charged and he was taken to a trial deprived of liberty. In a letter written by the photojournalist, he stated that "between dignity and freedom I chose dignity, it is not negotiated with anyone". On December 5, 1 year and 4 months after his arrest, the photojournalist's hearing was scheduled, but this was postponed to January 30, 2020. On December 13, the investigative work that carried out before being detained by SEBIN officials.³¹

VENEPRESS AND TELECARIBE (December, 18):

SEBIN officials arbitrarily raided the facilities of the Venepress media, in the country's capital, and Telecaribe, in Puerto La Cruz, Anzoátegui state. In a statement, the directors of these media reported that officials blocked access to the offices until a court disposes of the seized assets. They also expressed that the officials used as an excuse the search for financial and legal documentation of the operation of Telecaribe and Venepress "(...) we are not political or criminal companies, but the necessary media in a democracy", they said.³²

SCAMS ON BUY-SELL DOLLARS ON SOCIAL MEDIA

Due to exchange restrictions, the bolivar's devaluation and hyperinflation, the buying and selling dollars became part of the daily life of Venezuelans to protect themselves from undercapitalization. Likewise, social networks became the preferred tool for many for these transactions, which brought with it a significant increase in scams through these platforms. During 2019, cybercriminals carried out these scams posing as relatives or friends of the victims by writing to them through their social networks, using hacks and in some cases phishing.

According to an investigation by El Pitazo, the CICPC identified the city of Cabimas, Zulia state, as the origin of many of these scams. Likewise, they assured that the complaints received by the CICPC, the only body authorized in Venezuela for this type of case, come from Venezuelans of all social classes, which is why they receive 10 to 15 daily complaints for this type of crime. An official of this police force declared the following for the investigation of El Pitazo:

"(...). It is a crime that is committed at the same time from several places. They are large groups, it can be said of up to 200, that before jumping into cyberspace they receive classes by the computer engineers themselves who preferred to use their talent to commit crimes".³³

EDGAR ANDRÉS ARTEAGA SUÁREZ (August, 30):

A 20-year-old boy identified as Edgar Andrés Arteaga Suárez, was arrested for practicing sextortion through digital platforms. After initiating conversations with his victims, he asked them for photos without clothes and once he received them he asked them for money in exchange for not publishing them.³⁴

BELANKAZAR

Belankazar is a Caracas-based modeling academy and agency, which was charged with allegedly offering a subscription service on its website, where they shared inappropriate multimedia content from the bodies of minors. The complaint was made after a thread of tweets went viral in which it was ensured that the agency's YouTube account was used to entertain groups of pedophiles on the Internet and that minors were being exploited.³⁵

On September 3, the CICPC's director, Douglas Rico, reported on his Instagram account that the 3 directors of the modeling academy were arrested and seized all the

SUBMARINE CABLE REPAIR AFFECTS INTERNET CONNECTIVITY (December, 01):

From 9 AM to 2 PM on Sunday, December 01, connectivity to various Internet providers in the country was limited due to the repair of one of the Century Link company's cables that runs from Panama to St. Croix, passing for Venezuela. According to the data published by VE sin Filtro,³⁷ the ISPs CANTV and Digitel did not present major limitations at 12 PM. However, Movistar's connectivity levels fell to 53%, in Inter to 32% and the service in Supercable was affected in its entirety.

CHAPTER III VULNERATION AND CRIMINALIZATION OF DIGITAL SECURITY AND FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

CASE: WEB PAGES BLOCKS

FRENTE AMPLIO VENEZUELA LIBRE (January, 11):

The Frente Amplio Venezuela Libre, it's an organization that groups together political parties opposed to the dictatorship of Nicolás Maduro and civil society factors that aim to work and be part of the transition process for the restoration of democracy in the country. Through the social network Twitter, they reported that their website was blocked by some local ISPs:

*"We inform the country and the world that, in a new attack against the right of Venezuelans to information, the government has ordered to block access to our website www.frenteampio.com from local operators. We continue in the fight, nothing will stop us".*³⁸

Frente Amplio Venezuela Libre @FrentAmplioVzla · 11 ene. 2019
Informamos al país y al mundo que en un nuevo atentado contra el derecho de los venezolanos a la información, el gobierno ha ordenado bloquear el acceso a nuestra página web frenteampiovenezuela.com desde los operadores locales. Seguimos en la lucha, nada nos detendrá. #11Ene

WIKIPEDIA (January, 12):

The free encyclopedia Wikipedia, was blocked by CANTV after a series of editions in which they placed as president No. 51 of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, the current president in charge of the country, Juan Guaidó. According to NetBlocks, this was due to "a stricter regime of Internet controls."³⁹

APORREA (January, 11):

The informative web portal Aporrea was blocked by CANTV and Movilnet. Aporrea denounced that it was an intermittent blockade, since the users of these ISPs could enter at certain times and then access was blocked. In addition, they assured that "the impossibility of having access to our website is not due to technical problems on our part. Aporrea's servers are 100% operational".⁴⁰

TUNNELBEAR AND WINDSCRIBE (January, 15):

The VPN services, TunnelBear and Windscribe, were blocked through CANTV. These tools are used by citizens to evade the censorship imposed by the Venezuelan dictatorship towards digital platforms and to be able to access blocked or restricted content. According to VE sin Filtro, this was a TCP block that affected the websites and authentication of their applications.⁴¹

VOLUNTEERS X VENEZUELA (February, 16):

Voluntareers X Venezuela, is a portal created so that Venezuelan citizens could register and be part of the group of volunteers that supports the efforts of the Venezuela Help and Freedom Coalition, to address the Complex Humanitarian Emergency. After his page, voluntariesxvenezuela.com, was the target of phishing and DNS spoofing by CANTV, access to the portal was blocked by HTTP and SNI filtered in CANTV and Movilnet.⁴²

VENEZUELAIDLIVE.MDSTRM.COM AND VENEZUELAIDLIVE.COM (January, 22):

The Venezuela Aid Live concert took place on February 22nd and was broadcast live through venezuelaaidlive.mdstrm.com. The main objective of the event was to raise funds to deliver humanitarian aid to Venezuela and face the Complex Humanitarian Emergency. However, the event's streaming and website were blocked by DNS in the country's main ISPs, including: CANTV, Movistar, Digitel and Inter.⁴³

VIVOPLAY, VPITV, EL TIEMPO AND EVTV MIAMI (February, 22 and 23):

VE sin Filtro confirmed through its Twitter account that the information platforms VivoPlay, VPITV and the Colombian media El Tiempo, completed 4 consecutive days blocked by DNS in CANTV, Movistar, Inter and Digitel. Likewise, access to the EVTV Miami media portal was blocked by CANTV.⁴⁴ These blockades occurred while said media carried out coverage on the Colombian-Venezuelan border.

CHANGE.ORG (February, 28):

Change.org is a free and public platform for online petitions, of a civic and social nature, with the aim of claiming compliance with human rights. According to VE sin Filtro, the platform was blocked in CANTV through an SNI filter,⁴⁵ after it received requests for signatures supporting a military intervention in Venezuela and a request from Volunteers X Venezuela, requesting a visit from the

BLOQUE DEARMAS, MERIDIANO AND 2001 (March, 01):

In a statement published by the media Meridiano and 2001, they denounced that CANTV users could not access the content of their pages due to an alleged block:

"Since February 27, users of the Bloque de Armas portals, 2001.com.ve and meridiano.com.ve report access problems, especially those whose Internet provider is ABA from CANTV. As has been verified, the pages can be accessed from other providers".

On March 1, VE sin Filter, reported on its Twitter account that the web pages of these media were blocked by HTTP and SNI filtering. In addition, they added that the Bloque de Armas page was blocked by DNS through Movistar.⁴⁶

The screenshot displays the VESINFILTRO website interface, which lists blocked sites. The top section shows the start date as 2019-03-01 and the status as ongoing. The first entry is for '2001', described as a Venezuelan news daily, with a red 'Blocked' label. The second entry is for '@BloqueDeArmas', described as sports focused media, also with a red 'Blocked' label. The third entry is for 'meridiano.com.ve', described as sports focused news media, with a red 'Blocked' label. Each entry specifies the ISPs as CANTV, the category as News, and the kind of block as HTTP block. The VESINFILTRO logo and social media handle (@VESinfiltro) are visible at the bottom of each entry.

NOTICIAS.ORG (March, 20):

CANTV applied a DNS blockade to the news medium Noticias Venezuela. According to the information provided by VE sin Filter, the blockade was carried out since at least March 19.⁴⁷

ANTENA 3 (March, 24):

After the Antena 3 channel was censored in Venezuelan cable operators by CONATEL, the medium enabled live streaming so that Venezuelan users could enjoy its content. But the site was blocked in CANTV by HTTP and HTTPS, according to the information published by VE sin Filtro on its website. In the words of the organization, this type of block cannot be bypassed by changing DNS, *"and the use of most VPNs would be registered by Antena 3's streaming server as a connection outside of Venezuela."*⁴⁸

CNN EN ESPAÑOL (April, 30)

Since 2017, the CNN en Español channel has not been available through subscription services in Venezuela, which is why Venezuelans went to its informative website cnnespanol.cnn.com to access its content. It was blocked by CANTV through SNI filtering.⁴⁹

EL PITAZO AND EFECTO COCUYO (June, 17 and 18)

Access to the informational portals El Pitazo and Efecto Cocuyo was blocked in the ISPs Digitel, Movistar and CANTV, as reported by IPYS, who with measurements carried out through OONI Probe, during June 17 and 18, detected these blocks by HTTP and DNS.⁵⁰

According to the information published by IPYS, El Pitazo suffered its fourth blockade in the last 22 months. The blocks to this portal were mainly due to DNS, which affected elpitazo.net for the first time, the fourth domain used by the media to deal with the blockages that are systematically suffered. On the other hand, El Pitazo had unofficial access to an email in which CONATEL ordered the ISPs to carry out the blocks to this medium:

“Dear colleague: we notify you that the url: elpitazo.net has been registered in the system so that it can be processed by your client. The request required for the HTTP and HTTPS protocols. It is appreciated to acknowledge receipt of this document, as well as to inform the email account: Seguimientourl@conatel.gob.ve, once the previously requested processing is effective”.

VAMOSBIEN.COM (June, 24):

Vamos Bien, was a portal created by the office of the president in charge, Juan Guaidó, to register Venezuelans interested in participating in the Plan Back to Home, created for Venezuelans abroad, and in the Plan Go to Work, for the residents of the country. On the same day of its launch, it was blocked by SNI filtering from CANTV.⁵¹

DIARY LA VOZ AND LA REGIÓN WEB (November, 27):

CANTV blocked access to the news media Diario La Voz and La Región, according to journalist Daniel Murolo, who also assured in an interview for Espacio Público⁵² that both portals were blocked by DNS.

ARMANDO.INFO (December, 01):

After publishing the report "Do you need to wash your reputation? Are deputies hired for this purpose?",⁵³ the informative portal Armando.info was blocked. "Our Armando.info portal is currently offline. We are working to reactivate our portal and send you today's report without blocking". In an attempt to evade the blockade so that users could access the report, the news outlet published it on its Facebook account.

Armando.info @ArmandoInfo · 1 dic. 2019

Nuestro portal armando.info está actualmente fuera de línea. Estamos trabajando para reactivar nuestro portal y hacerles llegar el reportaje de hoy sin bloqueos. Pronto les avisaremos

That day, Luis Parra, one of the deputies mentioned in the report for being part of a corruption network of the Local Supply and Production Committee (CLAP), accused the Armando.info journalist, Roberto Deniz, of being part of an extortion network: "There is a dirty war laboratory set up against us and some fellow deputies of the Venezuelan Parliament, by an extortion network, among them the supposed journalist Roberto Deniz and the Armando.info portal."

CASE: SOCIAL MEDIA BLOCKS

During 2019, the dictatorship of Nicolás Maduro through the state ISP, CANTV, carried out tactical blocks to different social networks, which temporarily prevented Venezuelans from accessing them. These blockades were selective and intermittent, since they were applied during the coverage of protests, when the Venezuela Aid Live concert was held, during the sessions of the National Assembly and during the speeches of the president in charge Juan Guaidó.

Access to digital platforms was allowed when the coverage and speeches of Juan Guaidó and the opposition leaders ended, as well as when the Maduro dictatorship addressed the country, which demonstrated a clear intention to control access to these pages, affecting the right to free and timely information of Venezuelans.

Below this there the total blocks numbers to different social networks and search engines, as well as some tools associated with them, throughout the year. Subsequently, a table is added with the blocks descriptions according to the social network blocked in each of the events.

CASE: CYBER ATTACKS

VOLUNTEERS X VENEZUELA (February, 12):

In order to steal data and information from the people who registered in the portal voluntarioxvenezuela.com, the dictatorship of Nicolás Maduro created a phishing page,⁵⁴ using the domain voluntariovenezuela.com and copying the interface of the original portal. Subsequently, through CANTV and Movilnet, they carried out a DNS spoofing attack to redirect users to the malicious website.

EL ESTÍMULO NEWS, KONZAPATA, CLIMAX, BIENMESABE, URBE AND ALNAVÍO (February, 20):

The media portals El Estímulo, Clímax, Bienmesabe, Urbe, Alnavío and Konzapata⁵⁵ were victims of DDoS attacks, which temporarily prevented users from accessing their content. Omar Lugo, director of El Estímulo, denounced that this act was an attack against free journalism in Venezuela and against the right to be informed.⁵⁶

Estimados seguidores de @elestimulo, @revistaclimax @bienmesabe_ @UB_Magazine en estos momentos nuestro portal está bajo ataque cibernético intenso, lo que nos impide difundir nuestros contenidos. Es otro atentado cotidiano contra el periodismo libre en Venezuela

VENEZUELAN OBSERVATORY OF SOCIAL CONFLICTIVITY (February, 23):

In its Twitter account, the Venezuelan Observatory of Social Conflict reported that its website was the victim of a DDoS attack on February 23, which caused users to be unable to access the page. "These actions do not intimidate us and we continue working for human rights in Venezuela," they said.⁵⁷

ANUNCIO HILO

1) Mi página web sebastianasinsecretos.com fue nuevamente atacada y sacada de circulación. Eso sucedió luego de publicar el artículo "El grupo terrorista ELN amenazó la marcha del 1 de mayo convocada por Juan Guaidó en Venezuela"

RUNRUNES NEWS (May, 27):

The website of the digital medium Runrunes was the victim of a DDoS attack. According to a source in the media, the numerous requests to enter the information page came mainly from Russia, with 80% of traffic and 20% from South Africa. The attack was carried out after the media published the report "Victims Monitor 2018: 256 people died at the hands of the FAES in Caracas",⁵⁹ in which they revealed that during 2018 extrajudicial executions became the most frequent homicides in the city capital, being the State security forces the main perpetrators and grouping 601 homicides of the 1,364 registered.

VENEZUELAN 24 NEWS CENTER (September, 14):

The web portal of the news outlet Centro de Noticias Venezuela 24 (CNVE24) was the victim of a DDoS attack.⁶⁰ As reported in their Twitter account, they received more than 1,000 requests to enter their page at the same time and, 72 hours later (on September 16), they increased to 12,000 requests to enter; which temporarily suspended access to its website.

CASE: HACKINGS

EMBASSIES WEB PAGES OF VENEZUELA (February, 07):

At least 10 Venezuelan embassy web pages were hacked. According to Efecto Cocuyo,⁶³ the attack was directed at the website of the Venezuelan Foreign Ministry, where the portals of these delegations are located. The countries corresponding to the affected pages were: Canada, Colombia, Russia, Guatemala, Italy, Egypt, Costa Rica, Argentina and Mexico. When the portals were entered, a statement was shown expressing support for the president in charge, Juan Guaidó.

PROMEDEHUM (June, 17):

Workers of the NGO Promedehum, focused on defending and assisting victims of human rights violations, reported hacking attempts to their social networks and emails, after having received multiple verification requests for password changes. According to Espacio Público NGO,⁶⁴ the members of the organization had previously received a series of suspicious messages on their work phones, sent by an alleged delivery company that also asked them to enter suspicious links to receive packages that the organization did not expect.

LUIS CARLOS DÍAZ (March, 11):

The journalist Luis Carlos Díaz wife, Naky Soto, denounced that since 5:30 PM on March 11, she lost communication with him, who had told her that he was going home to rest.

During the early hours of March 12, SEBIN officials took him home in handcuffs and carried out a raid in which they took computers, cell phones, and cash and threatened them if they talked about what happened⁶⁶ In a video, Soto reported on the raid, and invited citizens to attend the Prosecutor's Office to demand the release of Luis Carlos, who was transferred to Helicoide.

On the morning of March 12, the SEBIN reported that Luis Carlos Díaz was detained on charges of conspiracy to cause the blackout that affected the entire national territory and that same day the journalist was charged with instigation to commit a crime and was granted conditional release, under presentation regime every 8 days. She was also prohibited from testifying about the case, participating in demonstrations, and leaving the country.⁶⁷

KAREN PALACIOS (June, 01):

Karen Palacios, a 25-year-old young clarinetist and a former member of the National Philharmonic Orchestra of Venezuela since the age of 11, she was arbitrarily detained by DGCIM officials after denouncing through her Twitter account that her contract in the National Philharmonic Orchestra was rejected "for signing against the regime". Karen Palacios was charged with instigation of hatred.

Karen Palacios @KrenClarinet · 26 may. 2019

Primera vez que abro un hilo

Les cuento por acá que tengo aproximadamente 3 meses tocando Clarinete (1er clarinete) en la orquesta Filarmonica Nacional. Esperando un contrato de tres meses, que ellos me ofrecieron, para luego presentar mi audición y poder quedar fija.

DGCIM officials went to her home in Carrizal, Miranda state, and posed as orchestra teachers, making her believe that they would take her to the Victim Assistance Center. Her mother, Yudith Pérez, accompanied her and when they were in the vehicle, they were notified that she would be detained at the DGCIM headquarters for alleged inquiries; this without a court order and in a completely arbitrary.⁷⁰

During her stay at the DGCIM headquarters, Palacios, who is asthmatic and suffers from depression, was in a cell with 10 women, only 2 bunk beds and no windows, where she was subjected to psychological torture. On July 11, despite having a release ticket, Palacios was transferred to the National Institute for Women's Orientation (INOF), a prison in Los Teques, until her release on July 16.

CARLOS VARÓN AND RICARDO PRIETO (June, 27):

The Mérida's state officials fire department, Carlos Varón and Ricardo Prieto, were removed from their position by decision of the First Commander of the fire department, Ángel Alfredo Muñoz.⁷¹ Both, Varón and Prieto were charged with the crimes of vilifying the President of the Republic and aggravating public instigation. They had previously been charged with incitement to hatred. The firefighters were jailed for 48 days and were released with parole, a filing regime every 30 days, and a ban on leaving the state and giving statements.

Both officials were arrested in 2018, after spreading a video on social networks in which a donkey appeared that they compared with Nicolás Maduro and asked for improvements to the workplace, after showing the conditions in which he was the place.

WILMER QUINTANA (July, 12):

CICPC officials detained journalist Wilmer Quintana⁷² after he denounced corruption acts on his social networks regarding the management and distribution of CLAP bags and the failures in the supply of domestic gas in Guárico state. The journalist was accused of promoting and inciting hatred, established in the unconstitutional Law Against Hate. On August 6, the SNTP denounced that Quintana suffered a heart attack while he was detained at the CICPC headquarters in San Juan de los Morros, Guárico state.⁷³

CHAPTER IV OVERCOMING CENSORSHIP

INFORMATION ACCESS AND FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION CAMPAIGNS

PSIPHON, REDESAYUDA AND HUMANO DERECHO ALLIANCE

The increase in censorship and restrictions on ISPs faced in Venezuela, RedesAyuda, Humano Derecho Radio Station and Psiphon,⁹⁰ teamed up to help citizens in Venezuela to stay informed and access content blocked by their Internet providers, providing them with a VPN free, safe, reliable and without ads.

FREE INTERNET, FREE VENEZUELA

RedesAyuda with the Commission for Human Rights of the State of Zulia (CODHEZ) and the Venezuelan Electoral Observatory (OEV), carried out the campaign "Free Internet, Free Venezuela",⁹¹ whose objective was to raise awareness about the importance of the defense of the digital rights, as part of the fight for a free and democratic Venezuela; also, to making visible how these rights were violated in the country based on 3 problems:

1. Freedom of expression and censorship on the Internet: how Internet access and freedom of expression are repressed and limited by the Venezuelan dictatorship.
2. Internet governance: the lack of investment in spaces for development, conditions and guarantees on the Internet, which can be used for the full exercise of digital rights.
3. Protection of personal data: how the dictatorship has built databases for years, with the aim of applying social controls for partisan electoral purposes.

⁹⁰ Psiphon VPN. <https://bit.ly/2KWAHgf>

JOURNALISTS PROTECTION COMMITTEE

RedesAyuda, in alliance with the Americas Program of Journalists Protection Committee,⁹² carried out a campaign through social media, with the aim of teaching Venezuelan journalists digital security tools and practices that would allow them to face the dangers posed journalistic work in the country, given the increase in aggressions by the Venezuelan dictatorship during the first months of the year.

The topics that were part of the campaign are:

1. Safety communications.
2. Lock information.
3. Backups.
4. Strong passwords.
5. 2 Steps verifications.
6. Mobile safety.
7. VPN tool to evade censorship.

CYBER SPACE LAW

RedesAyuda joined more than 20 organizations to reject the draft Constitutional Law of Cyberspace of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela.⁹³ This pseudo-law sought to increase the scope of the powers of the Nicolás Maduro dictatorship in the control and surveillance of Internet users, which represented a great threat given the background and the authoritarian nature of the dictatorship. The preliminary draft in one of its points defines terrorism concepts directed at any activity carried out on the Internet that may "cause terror" or "economic, political and social destabilization".

The approval of this regulation could promote self-censorship, as well as increase surveillance and control of the Venezuelan dictatorship on digital platforms, preventing citizens from accessing them freely and plural..

TECHNOLOGY COMPANIES RESTRICT SERVICES IN VENEZUELA

Due to Executive Order 13,844, issued by the president of the United States,⁹⁴ which aimed to block external economic support from the dictatorship of Nicolás Maduro, several technology companies decided to cease providing services to Venezuelans. Some of the most prominent companies to adopt this measure were: Adobe, TransferWise, Oracle and Sedo.

RedesAyuda and more than 40 organizations signed a petition for them to keep access to their services available,⁹⁵ complying with regulations in a way that takes into account the Venezuelans situation. Thanks to the efforts of organizations, cyber activists and users, on October 28, through a statement, the Adobe company reported that it would continue to offer its services to Venezuelans.

Desde @RedesAyuda, @VEsinFiltro, @ISOC_Venezuela y otras organizaciones de #DDHH en Venezuela, hacemos un llamado a las empresas de tecnología a mantener la prestación de sus servicios disponibles para los venezolanos. #9Oct

SURVEILLANCE EQUIPMENT CELLEBRITE COMPANY ATTEMPTED PURCHASE

On November 14, Nicolás Maduro announced the approval of 12 million euros, or its equivalent in Petros, to allow the modernization and equipping of the CICPC and the Integrated Police Information System (SIIPOL).⁹⁶ The approved resources, amounts and concepts were:

- € 5,402,250 (104,157 Petros) as additional resources to the current spending budget of the CICPC.
- € 256,890 (4,952 Petros) for scanning electron microscopes acquisition.
- € 6,800,000 (132,658 Petros) to update the Police Investigation and Training System and modernize the CICPC's National Data Center.
- € 51,300 (989 Petros) for “Cellebrite Touch2” technological equipment acquisition, tools that allow the extraction of information from telephones and computers, used to investigate alleged crimes.

RedesAyuda joined more than 25 organizations to make a call to the Cellebrite company to avoid the sale of their equipment to the Venezuelan dictatorship,⁹⁷ to prevent them from being used for data extraction or surveillance of journalists' devices, activists, opposition leaders or human rights defenders.

CYBERPEACE INSTITUTE

As a way to continue joining efforts to defend human rights in the digital world, RedesAyuda joined a group of organizations that make up the CyberPeace Institute,⁹⁸ a body that seeks to provide assistance and reduce the impact generated by cyber attacks, as well as generate a culture of peace and collaboration in cyberspace.

SAVE “.ORG”

Ethos Capital offered one billion US dollars for control rights acquisition over the “.ORG” domains. Given this fact, RedesAyuda joined more than 870 organizations and 27,000 people, in a campaign led by the Electronic Frontier Foundation (EFF), to oppose and try to stop the sale, since it could lead to: increased prices, greater surveillance and increased censorship; factors that could affect the work of organizations engaged in human rights advocacy and online.

OVERCOME INTERNET CENSORSHIP APPLICATIONS AND TOOLS

VPN

A VPN or virtual private network is a tool that allows you to securely connect 2 or more devices through a virtual point-to-point connection. It allows to evade most types of blocks to web pages, such as blocks by DNS, HTTP, IP and SNI filtering, by hiding the user's navigation from their ISP. VPN hides the user's IP address from the servers of the pages they visit, preventing them from tracking where the request was originally made from.

DNS SERVERS CHANGES

A DNS server or domain name system is in charge of translating the domains associated with a web page, for example: “redesayuda.org”; to the IP address in which it is hosted, for example: "104.31.64.195".

Changing the DNS servers that we use on our devices allows us to evade the DNS blocks imposed by ISPs.

2 STEPS VERIFICATION

Internet censorship is also manifested through hacks that seek to steal access to users' accounts to prevent them from making use of them to share and disseminate information.

The 2-step verification adds an extra security barrier to accounts on digital platforms, based on the principle of "something you know" and "something you have", being what you know your password and what you have is your verification method in 2 steps. 2-step verification will only be requested once the password has been entered correctly.

TOR BROWSER

Tor Browser is a web browser part of the Tor Project, which focuses on the privacy and anonymity of online users, as well as allowing them to bypass internet censorship and blocking. The connection and the traffic of the browser is made through the network of Tor servers, distributed around the world, for which the user's IP address is hidden from the server of the web page to which they access and navigation is hidden for the user's ISP.

Tor Browser implements a series of options to block trackers, hide the type of device and the operating system from which the user connects, and delete cookies and browsing history once Tor Browser closes..

OONI PROBE

OONI Probe is a tool developed by the Open Observatory of Internet Interferences (OONI), part of the Tor Project, created to document and measure Internet censorship, through the detection and diagnosis of blockades to web pages, applications instant messaging and online censorship circumvention tools.

The data collected by the application is published almost in real time and accessible through the OONI explorer, for independent third party analysis.

THE AMNESIC INCOGNITO LIVE SYSTEM (TAILS)

Tails is an operating system based on Debian, from Linux, focused on user privacy and anonymity. All Internet traffic you do on Tails is routed through Tor's network, so it has the same privacy and anonymity features.

Once Tails is closed, all the records (including files) that have been created during the user's session will be deleted, unless the user wishes to do so and explicitly requests it.

CCN – NATIONAL COMMUNICATION CENTER

The National Communication Center, is the presidency in charge of Venezuela official media, launched the “CCN” application to combat censorship and fake news in Venezuela. The application is designed to keep citizens informed about the progress, news and actions carried out by the president in charge, Juan Guaidó. Also, it allows activating notifications of outstanding news, has direct links to official social networks and has a radio with a live signal.

* Not include blocks to social media.

During 2019, censorship in the digital sphere in Venezuela increased significantly. More than 41 social network blocking events affected dozens of platforms and resulted in 110 cases of blocking. Other side, 60 events were counted among: blocks to informative and political web pages, blocks to tools for evasion of Internet censorship, phishing cyberattacks, DNS spoofing and DDoS; hacks to web pages and attempted hacks to email accounts and social networks, arrests and imputations for publications made on social networks and threats and harassment received through digital platforms or for having made publications on them.

The graph above shows the low impact that hacks have had on public figures, journalists, activists and anyone who through any digital means speaks out against the dictatorship, evidencing the good work that digital activists have done in promoting, instructing and training communities that had previously been affected to reduce their personal attacks and safeguard their digital integrity.

However, digital blockings have become the way and execution par excellence of the dictatorship to keep the country in a constant communicational hegemony; reinforcing their motto "no matter what happens or what the dictatorship of Nicolás Maduro does, the important thing is the Venezuelan people can't know". Preventing the flow of information and keeping citizens unaware is a doctrine of authoritarian governments. In this way, activists, civil society organizations and the media promote, create and overcome this constant information barrier of the government.

Other side, threats and harassment are increasingly common and evident, directed at the media, journalists and activists; all this in order to submit to this community and send a censorship message among the media.

CHAPTER VI CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

The cases developed above show an increase in the efforts of the dictatorship to deepen its communicational hegemony, undermining the pillars that still remain standing and allowing Venezuelans to access accurate information about what is happening in their country. These pillars are made up of some traditional media, portals and digital platforms, as well as the journalists and press workers who make life in them or independently.

The dictatorship, making arbitrary use of pseudo-laws such as the so-called “Law Against Hate”, seeks to intimidate and directly attack the workers of the press and citizens in general. Violations of digital rights such as the right to cybersecurity, privacy, freedom of expression and access to information online, have increased significantly; highlighting the blockades and cyberattacks against organizations and individuals.

Documentation, dissemination and reporting is essential and this work falls not only on communication professionals, but also on citizens who through social networks play a leading role in this. Therefore, journalism, infocitizenship and cyberactivism are key jobs to face and overcome the communicational hegemony that the dictatorship intends to impose.

From the previous report (2018), a significant increase in the violation of digital rights is shown, which is evidenced in the poor functioning of the country's ISPs and in the restrictions that prevent Venezuelans from accessing the Internet freely. Other side, restrictions and censorship of traditional media are still present: television channels and radio stations continue to be closed and arbitrarily taken off the air. Print media are also affected, mainly by the inability to access the raw material necessary for its operation.

RedesAyuda, considers that, under the control of the Venezuelan dictatorship and its policy of authoritarianism and repression, the cases will continue to increase, which is why it is imperative to move towards a transition process that allows guaranteeing the protection and respect for the rights of Venezuelans.

RedesAyuda will continue to promote alliances between NGOs and the media, as well as documenting the violations carried out by the dictatorship, with the aim of continuing to denounce the situations in the country and coordinate actions that allow justice to be brought to victims and perpetrators.

RedesAyuda makes the following recommendations, demands and suggestions:

1. Continue ignoring the Constitutional Law Against Hate for Peaceful Coexistence and Tolerance, due to the arbitrariness contained therein, which represent a great danger to freedom of expression.
2. Continue ignoring the draft of the Cyberspace Law of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, whose purpose is to justify attacks against citizens for their behavior and activity in digital media, becoming an extremely dangerous weapon against political dissidence.
3. Guarantees creations for development and exercise of digital rights in Venezuela, the creation of public policies to improving the infrastructure of state and private Internet providers, as well as the promotion of free Internet will be required for the exercise of freedom of expression and access to information in digital media, without limitations or censorship.
4. It is recommended to continue strengthening alliances between civil society and the digital media, with the aim of promoting the use of tools for the evasion of online censorship, as well as the execution of projects that aim to create measures to promote the reconstruction of democracy on the Internet.
5. Continue using social networks as a channel to inform citizens and as an information window, despite censorship and restrictions.
6. Continue to promote free and open Internet access, in which Venezuelans can decide which content to access to search for information and use digital platforms to exercise the right to freedom of expression without any type of restrictions, censorship and blockades.
